

Mr Tom Sadczuk has been playing the flute, clarinet, and saxophone professionally for over 30 years. He possesses an extensive performing, teaching and conducting history through this and his fifteen years spent in the Army Band as a professional reed player. Alongside this, he studied music at university where he furthered his knowledge on musical education and woodwind instruments. After moving to the UK, he established himself as a qualified woodwind teacher with QTS in England and have had many successes in teaching in the Chester area for the past fifteen years. Currently, he teaches all three woodwind instruments at Upton High School, Christleton High School and The King's School. He plays regularly in a professional capacity and cover all styles in both his teaching and playing, from Classical through to Pop and Jazz. During his teaching career he has had great experience in direction and conducting, and have successfully led numerous clarinet, saxophone as well as flute ensembles at both Upton High School and Christleton High School which have performed regularly at school concerts, charity and community events. Mr Sadczuk is enthusiastic and passionate about his subject and has a desire to impart this to young music makers as he seeks to achieve their true potential.
